Relief Printed CMP Stamps—The Dove of Basel

by Sandy Stover (#2325)

Editor's Note: This is the seventh article in a series, adapted from a book on classic multicolored postage stamps currently being written by the author.

The last four articles were a review of twenty recess (intaglio, line-engraved) classic multicolored postage (CMP) stamps—the total that were printed using that method. Now I turn to the far more numerous (137) relief (typography, surface-printed, letterpress) items. The focus will be almost entirely on pre-1918 issues. And while there may be a general collector preference for line-engraved stamps (at least aesthetically), I hope readers will agree with me that the following relief printed CMP stamps are as fascinating, even aesthetically, as the more notable of the intaglios already reviewed.

Problems of Registration Error in Early Multicolor Relief Printing

A quick diversion into the history of printing technology: As stated earlier, the recess printing of CMP stamps was the most error-prone of all possible methods. That does not mean, however, that other multicolor methods were “pieces of cake.”

In an 1886 letter to the Chairman of the British Board of Inland Revenue (quoted by John Easton in Postage Stamps in the Making), Warren De la Rue begged additional compensation for production of the 1887 relief-printed Queen Victoria Jubilee stamps. The supplement was needed, wrote De la Rue, to offset unplanned costs associated with registration error in the case of the set's bi-colored stamps (Great Britain, Scott 112, 113, 116, 118, 120). He argued that the cost of producing new machinery, dies and plates was only a “light proportion” of the work expended in solving the bi-color registration problems, the major effort having been time and labor devoted to “experiments” that were required to achieve satisfactory results. Furthermore, the new machinery was very “elaborate” and “difficult to work with.” Thus, “both in regard to those experiments, and in regard to the new apparatuses and machinery which we have established, a very heavy outlay indeed has been incurred by us.” De la Rue ended his plea on a hopeful note, stating that “we are sanguine that [the Board] will recompense us for the great effort that we have made in their service” (Easton, pp. 195-196).

Easton did not say whether De la Rue's pleading had its intended effect, but he did hypothesize about the new “machine”, and in so doing presented readers with an historic snapshot of a surprisingly Enclosed in this issue of The Circuit is the ISWSC roster, traditionally published every other year in the March-April issue. Due to technical difficulties, this issue is being published later than normal, however the May-June issue, featuring articles and Auction #36, will follow shortly.

Please take a few minutes to review your listing to ensure it is accurate. If any corrections are needed, please use the form on page 20. In addition, the Board would like to hear if the roster is of value to you and how you would like it delivered in the future.

Thank you for being a member of the ISWSC! Your comments and suggestions are always welcome.

Ventures in Printing

What these new printing appliances were [De la Rue's] letter does not reveal. Presumably they installed a two-colour Wharfedale machine, which has a double bed and two ink tables, but only one impression cylinder. The cylinder revolves twice as the elongated bed moves forward, taking the impression from the first forme in the first revolution, thus putting the first colour on to the sheet, and immediately following on with the impression of the second forme, containing the second colour, on the second revolution. As the paper is held by the cylinder grippers all the time it is receiving the two impressions the colours are bound to be in register (Easton, p. 196; emphasis added).

But of course, as De la Rue's letter emphasized, it was only by virtue of time-consuming "experiments" that the eventual bi-color impressions were "bound to be in register"—in other words, not "bound" at all!

The reader can well imagine, then, the bedevilment accompanying three or more printing impressions, even in relief printing. No doubt many of these difficulties were moderated by the turn of the century; and relief printing of multicolor stamps—throughout the classic period—would be nearly as frequent as printing by lithography (as discussed in my first article). But for the CMP stamps discussed here, almost all issued before World War I, multicolor relief printing was undoubtedly a bothersome process.

The Dove of Basel

Without question, the Dove of Basel—the only stamp issued by the Swiss Canton of Basel—is the most famous of all CMP stamps. It is the earliest and rarest CMP stamp. It is not only the world's first multicolored postage stamp, but it precedes all bi-colored postage stamps as well. (This discounts Canton Zurich's 1843 lithographs, Scott 1L1 and 1L2, which were printed in black over vertical red lines, a form of underprinting intended to prevent counterfeiting.)

Within the immensity of all postage stamps worldwide, the Dove belongs among an esteemed group of three dozen earliest Scott-numbered major listings, there to be preceded only by ultra-early stamps of Great Britain, Brazil, Canton Zurich, Canton Geneva and several cities of the United States (a few postmasters' provisionals and carrier stamps in the last case). It is also the world's first embossed stamp. James

Mackay noted two other "firsts" for the Dove: the first stamp "to be printed for use in another country" and the first stamp "combining two processes—embossing and letterpress [relief]" (Mackay, p. 185). (Strictly speaking, the Dove is printed by mixed relief/embossing methods; but I have included it here as entirely relief printed with respect to ink, while reserving the term mixed for relief/recess and relief/lithograph methods.) It is no surprise that the Dove has become a "cover stamp": Its popularity, as well as its antique beauty, has put it on the cover of the Scott 2005 Classic Specialized Catalogue of Stamps and Covers.

Conceived by Swiss architect/artist Melchior Berry (Berri), the Dove's design was printed—"after the engraving by Berry"—by Benjamin Krebs of Frankfurt am Main, Germany. The plates were copper and the stamps were issued in sheets of 40 (Salisbury, p. 6). Berry had used the same design—a white carrier-pigeon (i.e., dove), a letter in its beak, against a red ground—as an emblem on Basel's municipal postboxes. In the stamp's black ink are printed the Basel arms (crosier), the inscription 'Stadt-Post-Basel' (Basel City Post), and the value (2 ½ Rappen) (Bach and Winterstein, pp. 137-8).

Switzerland, Scott 3L1, Dove of Basel.

The first shipment of 8,000 Doves were not black, crimson and blue, but rather black, vermillion and green. The Scott catalogue describes the latter as proofs, but there is some disagreement about this. Bach and Winterstein at one point stated that "... about 41,000 Basle Doves were produced, not counting proofs in light red with green corners which were sometimes 'converted' into originals by overpainting" (Bach and Winterstein, p. 138; emphasis added). But in another place, they wrote: "The first shipment of BASLE DOVES, which were not issued—heretofore erroneously described as proofs or even as essays—had a green background and a vermillion center area" (Bach and Winterstein, p. 52; emphasis added). This second opinion is consistent with the account of Edith Faulstich:

... The [Basel] town fathers insisted that they did not order green and therefore did not want it, so the stamps had to be reprinted. Although the green items are now often called proofs in philatelic circles they are not proofs but actually were printed stamps which were refused... (Faulstich, p. 5).

It was evidently Berry who wanted the Dove embossed. Why? Al Altwegg suggested that the stamp's dove was printed in "relief" to prevent forgery (Altwegg, p. 26). But as John Easton stated, embossing "is not an adequate safeguard against forgery, for it can easily be repeated. . ." (Easton, 1948, p. 201); and this seems borne out by the number of Dove forgeries—at least seventeen varieties—described in considerable detail by Gustave A. von Gross in a series of Helvetia articles in 1942 (von Gross).
